

Private, Semi-Private and Group Voice Programs

Another extremely diverse instrument, the voice can be used in every music known to man from opera, to blues, to Broadway or classical. The list goes on and on. Historically, most professional singers choose classical training to strengthen their breathing, sound and range. This enables the student's voice to be more versatile.

From this basic understanding, voice lessons will give the student the opportunity to cultivate their own unique sound and style. By utilizing the rudiments of vocal technique, a voice student will learn reading, rhythm, vocal production, intonation, theory and more. You can never be too young to begin your training as a musician. Many teachers have different ideas as to what age is appropriate, but generally 12 years of age is a good place to begin serious Voice lessons. It is possible to start Voice lessons at a much younger age, but the lessons would focus more on basic musicianship skills and vocal breathing techniques in order to prepare a student for serious training as their body and voice matures.

At Ava Music with the help of our wonderful voice teachers, your child will be able to develop her/his talent from the very beginner to university advance levels.
